Hélène Cazes, Professor in the Department of French at the University of Victoria, Director, Topiques, Études satoriennes

This round-table, held entirely in French, brings together editors from STEM, the Social Sciences, and Humanities to discuss some of the challenges French-language, bilingual, and national journals face with the use of French in an increasingly English-dominated Academic world. Discussion will focus on themes, such as the use of French in bilingual and national journals that publish overwhelmingly in English, difficulties in attracting French-language content and strategies to increase submissions, being francophone on predominantly anglophone editorial or advisory committees, to name a few.

Moderated by: Emmanuel Hogg

1:00 - 1:45

“Whine and Wine”

As part of the planned program, the Committee is facilitating an informal “Wine and Whine” session, where members can visit virtual breakout rooms to discuss topics that we all find frustrating and/or difficult in our scholarly communication work and share tips with each other. There will also be a francophone space to discuss the need for French journals to organize and how CALJ can best assist.

Breakout room 1: Hosted by Michael Donaldson

Breakout room 2: Hosted by Eugenia Zuroski

Breakout room 3: Hosted by Emmanuel Hogg

All times listed in Mountain Time (MT)

Wednesday, June 2, 2021

Bonus session

13h00 - 14h30 Confronting the Legacies of Colonialism in Academic Publishing [Open session for Congress]

Ross Fair, Ryerson University

Emmanuel Hogg, Histoire Sociale/Social History

Laurie Jacklin, Ryerson University

Ateeka Khan, McMaster

Krista McCracken, Algoma University

How do today's increasingly diverse and precarious university educators maintain research agendas that balance their scholarly interests, complex lives, and interests in innovative scholarly approaches and data sources with demands from employers to continually demonstrate 'currency' through ongoing publications? Discussants in this workshop represent scholars in many life stages who navigate such challenges, including those with experience in traditional and new media academic publishing, editorial and peer-review functions, and ranking applicants' publications for lecturer positions.

Panel sponsored by CALJ/ACRS as part of the Congress Career Corner.
